

But most of all, he liked the upstairs library. It had something that no other room had: stained glass windows!

